News In Brief

National and Collegiate

Bloomington, Ind. — Dr. Alfred C. Kinsey said that he will skip Hollywood on his trip to California to complete interviews for his forthcoming book, "Sexual Behavior in the Human Female." He said he would interview women in a California community with a high proportion of church-goers, and in a town which is predominantly industrial.

Washington — Administration pressure for a speed-up in plans for repeal of the Taft-Hartley law brought roars of protest from Republicans. Sen. Robert A. Taft, (R-Ohio), co-author of the law, is confident the senate will approve many Taft-Hartley provisions which he will offer as amendments to the revamped Wagner act.

San Francisco — W. Somerset Maugham, noted English writer, is retiring as a professional writer. He celebrated his 75th birthday yesterday, and now considers himself an amateur once again.

Oklahoma City — Calvin Coolidge McLish, Chicago Cub rookie pitcher who can throw with either arm, might be able to bolster Charley Grimm's pitching staff this year. McLish is fascinated at the prospect of getting a chance to use his ambidexterity against major league batters. He will be the first two-handed pitcher in the majors since Tony Mullane of Cincinnati shut out New York five times that year.

Enrollment Sets New Winter High

A new record enrollment figure of 3,364 was set last Friday as winter quarter registrations drew to a close, said Leo Smith, registrar.

The new total is an increase of 160 students over the winter quarter record established a year ago when 3,204 students registered.

The winter enrollment denotes a drop of 94 from the all-time record registration of 3,458 set last Oct. 15.

This drop was caused by a number of things, according to Mr. Smith. "A few students dropped due to low scholarship, and we had 85 fall quarter graduates plus a few transfers." The drop was cited as being unusually small in comparison to previous quarters.

Wintersettlers Pass in Review . . .

Principals O'Shea and Gerrish Claim They Are Only Playing

Duane Hoynes, Malta, a junior in English, plays the part of a sailor who is spending his leave in the slum sections of New York. Hoynes has seen play production from two vantage points, from that of the unseen stage crew and from that of the actor. He acted in the junior and senior plays in high school and in addition, did a great deal of publicity and back stage work in the army. An old-timer at MSU, he appeared in "This Is the Army" in 1942.

Cooperation Necessary

When asked if he preferred acting to stage work, Hoynes was noncommittal but said that for a successful show, the responsibility rested equally upon the actors and upon the men and women behind the scenes, without whose efforts no show would be possible.

"This part is quite different," Hoynes said, "from anything I have ever played before. The play really is moving, even at rehearsals."

Michael O'Shea, a sophomore in English from Spokane, plays the part of the first girl, who is a typical under-privileged girl of the slums.

Miss O'Shea last starred as Pegeen in last winter quarter's Masquerade production, "Playboy of the Western World."

Forestry School Featured on KGVO Broadcast

MSU's School of Forestry was outlined last week in a panel discussion during the program "Conversation of Natural Resources; the Life Blood of Western Montana," heard at 11:45 a.m. over KGVO.

Participating in the program were Dr. Kenneth P. Davis, dean of the forestry school; Prof. T. A. Walbridge; Gary Moon, Sioux Falls, S. D., senior; and Dave Fuller, Wilsall, Mont., freshman.

The subjects discussed were the purpose of the school and its four year curriculum, what the summer program offers, the senior spring trip, the coming Foresters' ball, and how the school promotes conservation.

Chow and Cold Bring in Bums

A contingent of bums and hobos invaded the university district last Friday night. The bitter cold and the icy winds of Hellgate forced most of them into the Theta Chi fraternity where some of the local boys were throwing their annual Hobo Arts ball.

To the vagrants this was a haven from hell. Good 'ole hobo mulligan stew and black coffee were simmering in blackened pots over a fire of pilfered coal in the kitchen — ah, this was 'de bums ecstasy with real luxury.

King Robb Sykes welcomed all the visiting hobos and hoboesses. The jungle was really homey, decked out with fancy wallpaper of newspaper and bread wrapper motif. All the bums came in the proper dress of ripped, torn, be-draggled, and dirty clothes. However, red underwear and top-hats predominated 'de mode of retire.

Pat Lusk and his lady hobo along with Dr. and Mrs. Lory were official visiting delegates and got a special seat on the floor near the fire. Bill Humiston and his band of bums provided a little moosic.

Last year one of the visiting bums was picked up by the local bulls for vagrancy but this year no fatalities were reported other than the sad case of one poor bum. He was lost for two hours and wandered around in the cold thinking that the dance was Truman's inaugural ball.

Hansen Discusses Future Concerts

Bert Hansen, professor of English, represented the University at a public meeting in Great Falls last week to discuss future Community Concert plans.

Before he left Missoula, Hansen said he expected a permanent organization to result from the meeting. He said that MSU will work with the group to strengthen and improve programs of the Community Concert.

While in Great Falls, Hansen will confer with the social science division of the Montana Institute of Art. This unit will soon begin a tentative study of Montana.

Following the Great Falls conference, Hansen will travel to Conrad to discuss the organization of a community improvement project.

X-Ray Technician Calls For Student Support To Combat Tuberculosis

"The statewide program to eradicate tuberculosis can only be successful with the wholehearted cooperation of all those concerned," said Forrest Owens, X-ray technician.

The portable X-ray unit has been on the campus for more than a month and still more than two-thirds of the students and faculty haven't taken advantage of its service. This is a free program sponsored by the State Board of Health and is on the campus in cooperation with the university health service.

"By appearing at the unit whenever it is in your locality a periodic check can be made of the condition of your lungs and thus make it possible to check tuberculosis in its earliest stages," stated Mr. Owens. X-rays take a minimum amount of time.

The health service is making a schedule of the time of day for the faculty and students to report for X-rays. Persons whose names fall in the groups on the schedule are urged by the health service to report at the designated time if they can. Those not able to come at the stated time should come as soon as possible.

The following is the schedule of the persons who should report for X-rays today and tomorrow:

Panel to Probe Teaching Game

A panel discussion considering teaching as a career will be featured at the Education club meeting Thursday, Jan. 27, at 7:30 in the Copper room of the Student Union.

Former high school teacher Henry Zahn, now an insurance agent, and Montana Kaimin editor Paul Hawkins will challenge the field of education as a career. Lloyd Gass, education student, and Myron J. Loe, graduate education student, will discuss the subject from the educator's point of view.

The discussion will focus specifically around the questions: Does education provide vocational satisfaction as a career? Does the community demand too much of a teacher and does it place too many moral restrictions upon him? Does the field provide large enough salaries to warrant the four or five years education necessary?

Other related questions will be taken up and interested students are invited to attend.

WOOLFOLK TO HEAD RANGE STATION HERE

Edwin J. Woolfolk, '32, has been named chief of the range research division in the Northern Rocky Mountain Forest and Range Experiment station at Missoula, succeeding Leon G. Hurtt, head of the station since 1931.

Woolfolk was transferred from his post as assistant chief of the division of range research for the United States forest service in Washington, D. C., which he had held since 1946. Prior to that date, he was in charge of the Miles City branch of the experiment station in Montana.

Warsinske Scholarship Open To J-School Sophomores

Journalism sophomores who would like to apply for the Warsinske scholarship in agricultural journalism are requested to meet with Dean James L. C. Ford and Professor Robert Struckman in J-208 Friday at 3:30.

The scholarship, amounting to $300, was established by Norman Warsinske, editor and publisher of the Western Livestock Reporter, to bring better technical writing into the field of agricultural journalism.

The scholarship is awarded annually to an outstanding journalism sophomore interested in entering this field at the end of his sophomore year. Both men and women are eligible.

The student spends his junior year at the state college in Bozeman specializing in agricultural courses before returning to the University to complete work for his journalism degree.

Tom Mendel, Winifred, winner of the award last year, is studying at Bozeman this year. The 1947 winner was Herbert Jillson, Missoula, who is now working for the Western Livestock Reporter.

New Hall Dance Open To All MSU Males

New hall has extended invitations for the annual open house Saturday, to all university men's living groups and to the Bobcat basketball team, according to Zorka Mastorovich, New hall president.

Guests may attend the party any time between 3 and 5 p.m. Boyd Swingle's orchestra will provide dance music, and refreshments will be served.

Marian Lenn, New hall social chairman, is in charge of all arrangements.

The open house is an annual event, but was called off last year due to the death of Mrs. Monica Swearingen, former director of residence halls.

Are Fines Justified?

There have been numerous incidents recently wherein the university business office has delayed refunds due students for board, room, fees and other counts for periods of several weeks and longer.

It is the practice of the university business office to set a deadline for payment of fees, board, and room. If the payment has not been made by the time specified, fines are levied, usually amounting to a dollar a day with a maximum fine of five dollars.

The deadline and the fine are justified, but when the business office delays payment of refunds for the length of time that has been the habit, changes should be made. The students should have the right to expect the same measure of punctuality from the business office as the business office expects from the students.

The majority of the students attending the University are scraping close to the bottom of the sock in order to be here. The business office should take cognizance of this fact and get refunds back within a reasonable length of time. The money retained by the business office could be put to good use by these students.

Of course there are problems of administration and accounting that must be considered, but certainly the refunds could be taken care of within the space of not more than two weeks from the time the refund becomes due.

Another instance of poor administration comes with the closure of the business office ahead of the 4:30 closing time on weekdays. If fines are to be levied on delinquent students, it is the duty of the office to remain open until the exact time set for its closure. To many of the students, the buck fine means the difference between getting a textbook and going without. — W. S.

Sidelights of the News . . .

By CARROLL O'CONNOR

Granted the situation in Palestine is not funny to a lot of people in that quarter of the world, but in recent weeks anyone viewing it from this distant place could have found laugh material on at least two occasions.

The first occasion was that which found Bevin and Churchill barking at each other in the House of Commons, a place hallowed in the minds of Britons, though often desecrated by vocal virility. The second was a recent morning when our state department blinked awake to the task of mildly censuring the British for high-handedness in the near East, and at the same time mildly agreeing with British high-handedness in the near East.

Ernie and Winnie

In the first place, Ernie and Winston are as vastly different in their political, economic and social views as two peas in a pod; as widely divergent in every little thing as Siamese twins. Call Ernie a labor man, if you like, and Winston a conservative, or call them what both the Jews and Arabs have been calling them for some time past. Whatever you call them, they are nevertheless two black jacks in the same deck when it comes to international politics. Each was bred and nourished on the very mercantile theory of government that Emmott Campbell tried to expound on this campus some three weeks ago.

Phony Show

Each has stuck in his mind the idea that British investments abroad must be protected no matter what happens, even if the finest human ideals must be ground into muck, the finest of human lives sacrificed to that preservation. Yet, there they stood in full battle raiment like gladiators in an arena, challenging each other with rhetoric. Those fiery warriors probably had a private brandy together after it was all over, lit each other's cigars, and cried "Bully for you." Personally, it reminded me of the professional wrestlers who used to gather in a little place near Madison Square Garden in New York to laugh, drink and talk about girls, after convincing the crowd that they wished to wrench each other's limbs off. A great, funny, phony show.

British Broth

The second laugh, as I said before, was when our own pin-stripe and Chesterfield boys practically broke their legs trying to walk a fence. They were "concerned" over British armed threats against the Jews, but they also agreed heartily that the Jews bore watching. Why? Most probably because the British convinced them that "communist activity" was imminent in Pale-

Guy Bennett, ex-'51, and Betty Mae Forbes, Seattle, have become Mr. and Mrs. as have Robert Phair '50, Roundup, and Vivian Knudson, '48, Miles City.

The Rev. Emmet P. O'Neill, religious emphasis week speaker, suggested that the Jews were being armed by Russia. Both hints were sufficient, as we well know, to completely enervate, terrify, and panic Washington diplomats. So it seems we have not yet developed a decent, consistent policy toward Israel, and it seems, further, that while we allow British cooks to mess with our broth we'll keep tasting British spice in it.

There's no hope of changing our esteemed cousins. They were what they are almost back to the days when stone axes and loin-clothes were in vogue along the Strand. But we can certainly change ourselves. If we, as the Twentieth century's leading power, must inherit some mantle of the past, let it not be Britain's.

Nu's Risk Record In Kappa Sig Tangle

The Sigma Nus will risk their undefeated record tonight when they tangle with Kappa Psi in the Men's gym at 9:15. Theta Chi is matched against the Sig Eps at 7 in the opener, and the Foresters will play the ATO's at 8:15.

The Sig Eps netted their first win Monday night with a 35-34 edging of the Independents in a rough and tumble affair. The Sig Eps overcame a 28-24 halftime Independent advantage early in the second period and the game went nip-and-tuck the rest of the route. Deveber walked off with scoring honors for the winners with 13 points, while Pfeffer, with 11, topped the loser's scoring column.

The Row houses maintained an unbeaten record by dumping the Foresters, 22 to 18. Each team poured in 10 points the final period, but a four-point Row house margin at halftime proved the difference. Fox hit for eight points for the Row houses.

Phi Sigma Kappa notched its third straight triumph with an easy 54-36 win over the Kappa Sigs. The Phi Sigs lead all the way and were paced by Koon, who found the nets for 15 points. Weir contributed 11 to the Kappa Sig total.

The Sport lantern

BY DWAIN HANSON

Last fall, while Montana's grid-ders were suffering untold indignities, campus quarterbacks came to realize the necessity of the Grizzlies finding new conference affiliations. At the time, Denver university entertained notions of leaving the Skyline Six, and local sports fiends sat up and took notice of the potential vacancy. But when the Pioneers also had a disastrous season and lost their pioneering spirit, Montana supporters slouched back into their uneasy chairs.

Last week, similar hopes were crushed. Utah's student body launched a concerted campaign to induce its president to apply for admission to the PCC. For a while it looked like the Indian had outgrown his head dress and was willing to trade it for a Stetson. But the U prexy told the student body president's advisory council that Utah would have to be content to be a big frog in a little pond.

A vociferous observer, Idaho State college, took a keen interest in the student move. Its athletic director made official statements to the press that his school would apply for Utah's berth in the Skyline Six, should the Utah student body campaign materialize. He even advocated admitting little Weber college to permit splitting the conference into eastern and western divisions.

Although MSU officials made no comment of an affair which was still a touchy subject, it was impossible to overlook the cozy arrangement that might have been created had PCC bigwigs encouraged the move.

Cubs, Kittens Play Benefit; Cleaners Win

The March of Dimes fund will benefit from the annual Grizzly Cub-Bobkitten basketball tilt this week end at Bozeman.

Proceeds from the second of the two-game series will be contributed to the local March of Dimes drive at Bozeman. The Cubs meet the Bobkittens of MSC Friday and Saturday night while their varsity elders tangle here.

The Cubs took a 39-45 defeat at the hands of the City Cleaners last Monday in their first Western Montana Independent league game. The Cubs had a slight edge on the Cleaners in the opening minutes of the game, but lost it when the Cleaners touched off a scoring spurt which led them to a 22-29 halftime margin over the Cubs. Both teams looked ragged and spotty throughout the game.

Roman Pfeffer controlled both backboards for the Cleaners. Bob Hasquet poured 11 points through the hoop for the Cubs.

The Cubs meet Yandt's men's shop next Monday in their second league tilt.

should express is that the annual California newspaper-sponsored move to throw Montana out of the PCC was not timed to coincide with the Utah move to find itself a home in a conference of which Montana wants no part. Hysterical subs are a legitimate part of the reaction of the person who considers how convenient it would have been for Utah and Montana to exchange conference berths.

M Club Organizes Boxing Tourney; Appropriates Money

All boxers interested in participating in the annual "M" club tournament must be at the "M" club boxers meeting today at 3 p.m. in men's gym 304.

"The meeting has been called to find out what boxers are in school and to discuss plans to further boxing at MSU. Nobody will fight out of his class or weight, so anyone interested in boxing can feel free to turn out," said tournament manager Bob Anderson.

M Club Buys

The "M" club has allotted $250 for the purchase of boxing equipment. The money will come from the "M" club funds and will be returned to them from the proceeds of the annual tournament. No definite date has been set for the tournament as yet, but the tourney will be some time in the early part of March. This year all winners will receive sweaters. Other contestants will be awarded small gold gloves.

Big Turnout

More than 20 boxers are already working out for the tournament. Whitey Rosman, who won the outstanding boxer award last year, is scheduled to fight again this year. Marv McArthur, last year's winner in the 130-pound class, will be back in the ring again along with Lee Cork, heavyweight champ of two years ago. Keith Vick, middleweight title holder of last year, will put on the gloves for this year's contest.

Points will be awarded to each fraternity participating in the tournament and the "M" club cup will be awarded to the house with the highest point rating. The SAE's won the cup last year.
